Archiving CALA
The American Library Association Archives is the official repository for the American Library Association, including its divisions, committees, and round tables. The ALA Archives at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign was first established in 1973, after University Archivist Maynard Brichford and the ALA reached an agreement for the university to house and maintain the archives.1 Since then, the archives have been heavily used by ALA staff and members, along with scholars, students, and the general public.

Beyond the official records of the ALA, the archives also collects records related to the history of librarianship. The archives houses many records from the University of Illinois’s Graduate School of Library and Information Science, over 100 cubic feet of the vertical files from the University of Columbia’s School of Library Services Library, and many donations from ALA members and librarians. The archives also collects the records of other library associations, including the Art Libraries Society of North America, the Special Libraries Association, and the Chinese American Librarians Association.

The Chinese American Librarians Association has 2 boxes of records stored at the ALA Archives, coming to 0.6 cubic feet of newsletters, directories, and conference programs.2 Two boxes does not seem like a lot of records, but the materials within the boxes reveal a significant amount of information about the Association.

Directories have an odd way of being more useful than one would think and are often an invaluable source to archivists. Not only do they document the membership of the association, along with their respective job titles and libraries, but they also outline the leadership and structure of the CALA. This becomes useful when trying to trace the early leadership of the Association. Some directories even contain readily available statistics which break down the demographics of the CALA.

The Annual Conference programs are an insight into the issues that were important to the association in the past, from technology to diversity to leadership. These are values and concerns that are as pertinent today as they were over 20 years ago. Beyond outlining the events for the conference, the programs also provide information on speakers, provide reading lists of Asian-American literature, and give brief bios on the winners of the Distinguished Service Award.

The programs also have published letters from governors, mayors, and leaders within the profession that voice their support of the CALA. In one notable letter from the 1985 Annual Conference program, the Librarian of Congress, Daniel J. Boorstin, wrote, “The Library of Congress applauds the Chinese-American Librarians Association for bringing together once again those who have a special interest in promoting productive discussion and cooperation among librarians in the United States and the Asian Pacific region.”3 The Library of Congress directly... recognized the CALA in its endeavors and wrote of how they had directly benefitted from the work done by CALA and other professional associations.

Newsletters can be an especially rich source of information. Before emails and instantly available information on the internet, newsletters were a method for the president of CALA to communicate to members, publish Board meeting minutes, circulate reports, and provide information about members. The 1982 newsletter alone contains an annual report, a report from the Executive Director to the Board, a summary of the annual meeting, minutes of the Board meeting, information on chapters, news updates, and reports from committees and the treasurer. Published within a 26 page newsletter are materials that might fill an entire box at the archives.

Despite being a small collection, the Chinese American Librarians Association records help to flesh out the early history of the association. But it can still be improved by continuing to preserve and making accessible the records of the Association.

Digitizing the newsletters and conference programs was a great pleasure to the ALA Archives staff, especially for the 40th anniversary of the Chinese American Librarians Association. A special thanks goes to Lydia Tang, the graduate assistant for the ALA Archives, for her diligence and efforts in digitizing the records. THE FIRST ASIAN/PACIFIC CONFERENCE ON LIBRARY SCIENCE AND ITS SIGNIFICANCE

BY

MARGARET C. FUNG

Introduction:
The library's function to preserve, perpetuate and disseminate Chinese culture has been greatly enhanced by the advent of modern computer technology and sophistication of Chinese data processing. Many advancements have been made in this arena which has won international recognition over since the Chinese library/information scientists, computer scientists, and philologists got together and began to work on various standards and essentials of library automation since late 1979 in Taipei. It is indeed an effort toward the integration of culture and technology. Their accomplishments (CCCI, Chinese cataloging rules, Chinese MARC format, Cross Reference database of Chinese characters and the various solutions to Chinese linguistic problems) were made public in the AAS annual conference in Washington D.C. in 1980, followed by the International Workshop on Chinese Library Automation in February 1981, the Conference on International Cooperation in Chinese Bibliographical Automation in Canberra, Australia from August 29, to September 1, 1982, ASIS Special Symposium on Computer Processing of Chinese Library Materials and Computer-Assisted Chinese Language Instruction on October 19, 1982. In each of these conferences, new technological breakthroughs were announced and shared with the rest of the world. Many informative and scholarly presentations were also made in many other conferences such as IFLA annual Conferences, the ALA Annual Conventions, the CEAL annual conference, the Chinese-American Association for Science and Technology Conference and the ASIS/ESIT Conference on Information Infrastructure in Cairo, Egypt last year. Prevailing in the library and information field is a keen interest in the processing of Chinese library materials, Chinese library information systems, related Chinese language problems and computer technology as expressed by the recent convening of the First Asian/Pacific Conference on Library Science.
Origin:
The Cultural and Social Center for the Asian and Pacific Region (CSCAP) organized in 1968 is an international organization to promote friendly relations and mutual understanding among the peoples of the region through the furtherance of collaboration in cultural and related fields. It has sponsored various international conferences on different themes. The second ASPAC Conference on Publications and that on Guidance and Counseling which took place in Taipei were all very successful events. Three years ago, the author recommended to Dr. Paul Lee, the former Executive Director of the ASPAC Center that a conference on library/information science for this region be sponsored by the ASPAC center. It was very gratifying to have heard from Dr. Lee last summer that the ASPAC Center would like to co-sponsor such a conference in Taipei. Professor C.K. Wang, Director of the National Central Library (NCL) took on the responsibility of the co-sponsorship and decided that this Conference with the theme of "Library Automation and Resources Sharing" would take place in Taipei from March 13 to 19, 1983.

Preparation:
For the purpose of obtaining experienced inputs and adequate supports from the academic circle, the NCL and ASPAC Center invited many leaders of library/information science and computer science to be members of the Preparatory Committee. Many governmental, academic and professional organizations have also rendered their helping hands.

Participants and Presentations:
Present in the Conference were some 140 delegates from the following countries or areas: Australia, Fiji, France, Hong Kong, India, Japan, Korea, Macau, New Zealand, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, U.S.A., and Republic of China. Three major networks in the United States sent their representatives: Myra White from the OCLC, Linda Woo from Washington Library Network, and John Haeger from RLIN. His Excellency Chia-ken Yen, former President of the Republic of China honored the Conference with his presence and speech. Mr. Do-soon Chung and Professor Chen-ku Wang presided over the opening ceremony. Dr. Charles Davis, President of American Society for Information Science delivered a keynote speech entitled "A Note on the Impact of Modern Technology" attracted much interest and attention. Forty-two papers which consisted of overview reports of library/information services and resources of the various countries, library automation and networking, technical processing in native languages, library education, and library cooperation and information sharing were presented in five sessions. Interflow of discussion and exchange of constructive opinions prevailing throughout the Conference made this occasion even more appealing and interesting. Almost all the papers brought out something new and interesting to be shared. However among the technical papers, Dr. C. C. Hsieh's new research on text processing, Dr. Jack K.T. Huang's theory on Chinese input methodology and the Chinese MARC Working Group's paper on the MARC Format for Rare Chinese Books invited much interest. The newly devised text processing technique enables the input of the complete text into the computer with independent key word or phrase retrieval and Boolean logic retrieval possible. Several chapters of known titles have been input for demonstration purposes which have been proved successful. Professor Huang's newly designed diagonal input method is another scientific and more efficient method for inputting Chinese scripts. The MARC format for Chinese rare books has taken all the unique features of Chinese rare books into consideration, a pilot project has proven to be successful. Dr. C. C. Yang and the author compiled separate but complementary bibliographies on computer technology and automated library systems basic to the understanding of Chinese computer technology and automated library information system. The Conference was also highlighted by the exhibition of on line cataloging at the National Central Library. All the details of the Conference which included the agenda, the papers, the social functions, the tours, and the visits to the information facilities were all carefully planned and executed by the NCL Director and Staff. Their efforts were highly commendable and deeply appreciated by all the participants.

Significance:
It is extremely timely to discuss the matter of library automation and resources sharing at this time when Chinese library automation and the processing of Chinese scripts have been developed up to the point of definite usability, availability and reliability. It is especially meaningful to the people of the Asian/Pacific Region when they share the same aspirations, difficulties and anticipations. The Asian/Pacific Region has so much in common, even their written languages are more less the same, yet little interchange of opinions regarding processing vernacular materials was possible or facilitated. With the Conference, not only the three member countries (Republic of China, Japan, and Korea) were able to acquire understanding and to achieve more by sharing ideas but many other interested countries outside the region were also benefitted to be in touch of an area which is of vital importance in processing vernacular library materials. This Conference was well-received by all the participants. It is gratifying to realize the universal applicability of the Chinese information technology and know-how, and to the importance of such exchange of opinions through conferences of wide coverage and participation. Resources sharing within the region by means of library automation in the near future can certainly be facilitated and expedited through such constructive interchange of ideas, information, and technology.
OBSERVATIONS AND SUGGESTIONS
by Chiou-sen Chen

In August 1983, I went to China, through the arrangement of the China Science and Technology Exchange Center. I visited several major libraries and gave a few lectures on serials librarianship, cataloging and the implementation of AACR II, automation and networks. Although it was discouraging to see how backward Chinese libraries are, it was most encouraging to meet so many enthusiastic librarians who were eagerly looking for ways to upgrade their libraries. They were fully aware of the long hard road ahead of them. They were anxious to absorb new knowledge and learn about trends in the field of librarianship. They were willing to listen to suggestions and advice.

I have summarized here my impression of the general status of Chinese libraries and if any CALA member is planning a trip to China, I hope these observations may serve as a guide as to how he or she can lend some help, which is very much needed by Chinese librarians.

PERSONNEL: Since there are only two library schools in China, there is a severe shortage of academically-trained professionals. Most librarians are trained on the job. They may be skillful in one aspect of library operations, but lack a comprehensive overview of librarianship. Chinese libraries definitely need more well-trained, progressive people in order to raise the quality of service. The solution would be to establish more library schools.

Another personnel problem is caused by the classic misconception of the librarian’s job: to be a librarian is to sit behind a counter, stamp cards and hand out books. Therefore, it is a simple job that requires no skill. Under this notion, libraries become a place to dump unmotivated and inefficient workers who were rejected by other working units. To correct this misconception, librarians would have to work on publicity to win the understanding of both the public and the administration.

TECHNICAL SERVICES: All technical services are still in the manual stage and lack standardization. In general, cataloging quality is very low. I did not see one dictionary catalog but only separate author and title catalogs. There is no subject cataloging. Cooperation among major libraries is very necessary in order to improve the quality of cataloging rapidly. The National Library should serve as the coordinator and also set the standards. International standardization should be adopted as much as possible in order to participate in international networks in the future.

The acquisition of western language materials is a heavy financial burden on Chinese libraries. Compared to Chinese publications, the price of western materials is astronomical, especially current publications in science and technology. With limited funds, resource sharing among research libraries may be necessary. Coordination in collection development as well as inter-library exchanges must be established by Chinese libraries.

PUBLIC SERVICE: Public service is almost nonexistent in Chinese libraries. A reader’s first frustration is how to obtain a library card. The second frustration is how to borrow a book from the library. The reason is, of course, the number of library users is totally inadequate. All the libraries I visited have closed stacks with catalogs that are difficult to use. Circulation policy is usually quite stingy. Some libraries are treated very much like museums. For instance, if there is only one copy of an item, it does not circulate. Reference rooms are not always conveniently located. Copy machines are not publicly accessible. Although, at this stage, Chinese librarians are concentrating their efforts on upgrading technical services, I did advocate strongly for public service whenever I had a chance and hope that the idea will take root and grow.

AUTOMATION NETWORK: China is planning a library automation network. The National Library and several other major libraries already have computer operations. Therefore, they are very interested in learning more about networks in the United States. I see automation as a possible quick remedy to upgrade the bibliographic control of library materials. In order to catch up with the rest of the world, Chinese libraries might as well skip the painfully long process of bringing up their manual cataloging to international standard by individual libraries and concentrate all their resources and effort on an automated network. Yet, to set up such a network is very costly. Careful studies and planning must be made before the final commitment. A BRIEF INTRODUCTION TO COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY LIBRARIANSHIP IN CHINA

by Ma Shiyi 马士沂

The latest figures indicate that up to March of 1984, there are 753 colleges and universities in China and each of them has a library. In 1983 the statistics are that these libraries have a staff of 25,500 people altogether and the collection amounts to over 200 million volumes in the aggregate.

Since the founding of the People's Republic of China, the Chinese college and university libraries, like other institutions of higher learning, have taken a tortuous road. The libraries sustained heavy losses during the Cultural Revolution but have resumed operation and made great progress since 1978.

In September 1981 in Beijing, the Ministry of Education convened the National Working Conference of the College and University Libraries which issued The Rules for College and University Libraries and established the National Working Committee of College and University Libraries.

The Rules stipulates that a college or university library is the center for books, reference materials and other information which provides service for teaching, studying as well as research in the sciences and that the library is an important part of the work of teaching and research at any college or university. Not only does The Rules stipulate the mission of the libraries, but also specifies the conditions for them. In the last three years, colleges and universities did much in implementing these rules. The library staff has increased by 7,000 people of which 3,000 were college or university graduates. Library funds have been steadily increasing. Library construction also is at a new high--statistics indicates that over 40 buildings have been built since 1981, and 150 more in the process of being built. The total building area is now over 1.5 million sq. meters. Some of the libraries are also adopting advanced technologies.

The National Working Committee of Colleges and University Libraries is an organization of the Ministry of Education which oversees college and university libraries all over the country. The committee is made up of 47 member libraries and three departments of library science. Its main functions are the following:

1) Surveying and studying the conditions of college and university libraries, suggesting ways of improving them, and mapping out development programs;
2) Formulating rules and standards for college and university libraries;
3) Training the library staff and organizing channels of communication;
4) Organizing inter-library cooperation;
5) Compiling and publishing a journal which reports on the work of the college and university libraries;
6) Keeping abreast of developments in libraries abroad, learning about their experience, and forming communication networks internally and abroad;
7) Doing research on the library science profession.

After the National Committee was established, corresponding organizations were set up under the leadership of local educational offices in all the provinces (or municipalities and autonomous regions) except for Tibet and Taiwan.

The National Committee as well as the local committees, supported by the college and university libraries, organized the following activities: (1) Staff training -- In the past two years, about 7,000 persons participated in various training programs ranging from one month to a year in length; (2) Library science education -- Bring up to date developments in library science. Also the number of library science departments has increased to 25; (3) Rectifying and consolidating the foundation -- collection development, rational distribution of collections, and resource-sharing; (4) User training -- offering courses in information search and bibliographic instruction in colleges and universities.

Now Chinese higher education is reforming and developing in line with the needs of the Four Modernizations. College and university librarianship has an excellent future and is looking toward the future with confidence.

FLOOR PRIZES AND ENTERTAINMENT
The Chinese American Librarian Association (CALA) Twenty-First Century Librarian Seminar Series is a set of workshops, seminars and forums to enable collaboration and exchange between Chinese and American libraries, to create professional development opportunities for CALA members, and to develop partnership opportunities for CALA with other national and international library associations.

How Was It Started

As early as in 2005, a group of CALA members in the CALA Midwest Chapter, Xudong Jin, Haipeng Li, Guoqing Li and Shixing Wen, to name a few, had many discussions on establishing such a program. Haipeng Li, then president elect of CALA, along with Xudong Jin, a graduate from Yunnan University, took the leadership to arrange the first seminar as a CALAMW pilot project in 2006. The CALAMW Chapter delegation consisted of Shuyong Jiang, Xudong Jin (group leader), Haipeng Li, Haiwang Yuan, and Lisa Zhao. This pilot project turned out to be so successful that the Yunnan Provincial Library Commission and CALA signed an agreement to conduct the training project for a three year period, which was renewed for another three year term in 2010 and will be renewed again in 2014.
When Was It Officially Established

In 2007, this seminar series was officially established as a CALA project and managed by CALA International Relations Committee with Xudong Jin and Guoqing Li as co-chairs. A year later, CALA Twenty-first Century Librarian Seminar Series Task Force was set up, consisted of Xudong Jin, Guoqing Li, Haipeng Li (chair), and Lisa Zhao, and took over the management.

The Accomplishments

For the period of July 2006 through November 2013, a total of 14 teams went to Mainland China and Taiwan to provide seminars to Chinese libraries. A total of 62 presenters from the U.S. (10 non-Chinese speaking presenters) conducted a total of 14 seminars with over 170 presentations. The past 4 American Library Association presidents also participated.

Over 1,540 attendees from across China participated in the seminars altogether. Attendees represented academic libraries, public libraries, school libraries, vendors, and governmental organizations. The background of the participants was mainly library directors, librarians, associate research librarians/professors, with some support staff and students.

As a result of the accomplishments of the CALA seminar series, a partnership grant between CALA and the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign (UIUC) has been awarded by the U.S. federal agency, the Institute of Museum and Library Services, in 2008 to work with the Chinese government and libraries to ensure further collaboration. In 2008, one of the seminar hosts the Dongguan Library became the first recipient of the ALA Presidential Citation for International Innovation in China and the world.
Two books were edited/written by CALA members as training materials. There are: Academic Libraries in the United States for the 21st Century: Theoretic and Practices and Talk the Library Talk: Public Services.

The Current status

In 2010, the term of the Task Force was ended and no seminar was held in 2011. One seminar was held in 2012 and another will be held in 2014 as a continuation of the existing agreement with the partner in Yunan. Under the current president Lisa Zhao’s instruction, the 2013-14 co-chairs of International Relations Committee Shuyong Jiang and Guoqing Li are actively looking for new partners to host new seminars in 2014 and 15. So far, Guangzhou and Hainan have expressed their willingness and agreements are in the making.
Looking back 40 years of CALA history, there are many milestones and remarkable events to mark the growth of CALA as a professional organization. One of such milestones is no doubt the participation in the US-China grant project: “Think Globally, Act Globally.” This project was jointly funded by both the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Service and the Ministry of Culture of China and it is the first government cooperation project between the library community in China and the United States.

Introduction of the Project

Building on a June 2007 cultural accord, on November 16, 2008 the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS), along with the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) and the President’s Committee on Arts and Culture (PCAH) entered into a Partnership for Cultural Exchange with the Ministry of Culture of the People’s Republic of China to strengthen cultural cooperation between the two countries. A major portion of this agreement concerned libraries and museum professionals in both the United States and the People’s Republic. The agreement calls for sharing best practices in library services, including enhancement of public service and access to information in libraries, promotion of youth engagement, and applications of new technologies in libraries and museums to engage audiences and increase the availability of information online.

Under the auspices of the Laura Bush 21st Century Librarian Program, IMLS funded the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign Library, in partnership with the Library Society of China, and the Chinese American Library Association, to develop a partnership between librarians in the U.S. and China to enhance communication and relations between U.S. and Chinese librarians and to enrich the variety of information and services that U.S. librarians can offer their users. The project is providing workshops for Chinese librarians and library educators, in both the U.S. and China, on American practices in library public services. Conversely, U.S. librarians are learning about Chinese resources that can be made available online. The project has developed a Web-based portal at www.library.illinois.edu/China.

The “Think Globally, Act Globally” grant project had two goals:

1) encouraging mutual understanding between librarians in the U.S. and China and promoting awareness of diversity to overcome cultural barriers for U.S. librarians in serving user communities;
2) enhancing communication between U.S. and Chinese librarians with a view to developing and disseminating resources that can be of use to the library community in the U.S.

Both goals were met. The project carefully designed educational programs. Five different groups of Chinese librarians participated in the US programs learning about American libraries and services. Eight groups of US librarians, mostly CALA members, travelled to China giving seminars on topics of library management and practice.

The project also explored communication models with two Chinese libraries through developing a web portal for Chinese resources. The pilot portal found good open source software to share the Chinese cultural and historical materials.

The original grant project ran from September 2008 to August 2010, and was funded at $499,895. In 2010, the project received additional fund of $250,000 to extend the project for another year. The supplement agreement was exchanged during the 5th China-North America Library Conference in Beijing. In 2011, there was an additional no-cost extension which ended August 31, 2012.

CALA was involved from the beginning in the planning process. The project was stewarded by the Asian Library (now part of the International and Area Studies Library) and the Mortenson Center for International Library Programs of UIUC Library. The leadership of the project consisted of four members from UIUC Library, all of those are CALA members: Shuyong Jiang, Principal CALA Initiatives

As an official partner of the project, CALA sent the officers at the time, Haipeng Li, Executive Director (2009-2011), Shali Zhang, President (2009-2010) to serve as CALA representatives to the leadership team. Later, Guoqing Li (2011-2012) replaced Haipeng Li to serve the same capacity.

The project’s Executive Committee carefully designed two major activities to achieve the goals set forth in this project:

Part I. Educational and Professional Programs
The IMLS grant to UIUC has funded workshops for Chinese librarians and library educators, in both the United States and China, on American practices in library public services. The target audience for these workshops include U.S. librarians with expertise in the study of China and the Chinese language, U.S. librarians responsible for providing service to Chinese-language communities, Chinese librarians with expertise and experience with publicly available Chinese-language resources, collections, and services, and Chinese librarians who may benefit from participation in a broad-based continuing professional education program focused on library management, public services, and digital library development.

The grant-supported professional development activities have occurred both in the United States and in China. U.S. experts in library management and services, language materials, and digital libraries travelled to China to present seminars, and leading Chinese librarians visited the United States to attend professional conferences, special continuing education events, and to visit a wide range of American libraries.

As of August 31, 2012, the project has included 44 cities in 31 provinces in China and 45 cities in 15 states and Washington, D.C. in the United States. More than 7000 U.S./Chinese librarians have directly participated in the professional development component of this project.

A typical United States visit for one of the Chinese librarian cohorts (usually numbering approximately 10-11 individuals) includes:

- one week at the UIUC campus to get an overview of the workings of American libraries;
- three days in Chicago to visit the American Library Association, the Chinatown Branch Library and the Chicago Public Library;
- four days at U.S. host libraries outside the Chicago area (for example, New York, Skokie and Washington, D.C.);
- one week at an American Library Association conference with a specially-planned agenda.

Attendees were typically directors or deputy directors of academic, provincial, or municipal libraries, although the Secretary General of the Library Society of China and the vice chief of the Social Culture Bureau of the Ministry of Culture have also participated.

Specific topics of interest to participants have included disaster preparedness, networking and resources sharing, digital library development, digital preservation, preservation and conservation of library materials, marketing and promotion of library services, service to teens and youth, policy, and general management and administration issues.

Participants have found the professional development opportunities to be quite valuable and the connections made between librarians of the two nations promise to continue the informal professional development long after the project ends. Users of public libraries in the United States, too, have benefitted as Chinese visitors made presentations at local library branches. Five to seven US librarians travelled to China to give presentations to various Chinese counterparts. They usually went to three cities during the two-three week visit, each city hosting a three-day seminar. The remainder of the week included cultural visits. The majority of the attendees of the seminars were library directors, department heads, and librarians. The audiences also included teachers, library students, and government officials.

Presentation Topics:
1. Library laws, policies, and strategic plans of U.S. libraries
2. Library management and operational mechanisms
3. Public library services
4. Library assessment and librarians’ professional development, promotion and evaluation system
5. Public relations activities and their values
6. Academic libraries, special libraries, library education, and professional organizations in the U.S.

Part II. Access to Chinese Language Materials
The grant to UIUC also supported U.S. librarians in learning about Chinese resources that can be made available online to meet the growing demand for Chinese-language information about China. Suzhou Library and Northeastern Normal University Library (NENU) in Changchun, Jilin joined the partnership to help build a pilot Web-based portal to share some institutionally-developed Chinese language materials concerning local history and culture, especially from Manchuria and the history of World War II. These materials include various types of academic resources in a variety of formats from text documents to images and a few audio-visual materials. The Chinese partner libraries have identified more than ten databases that may eventually be accessed through the developing portal, but for the pilot stage, the project selected two image databases to begin with. Metadata of a total of 2540 digital materials were translated and added to the Web Portal.

The pilot web portal is an experiment to share web contents in different languages. In exploring new ways to communicate in developing digital contents, the project formed a special team in UIUC to help with the technology issues; the partner libraries in China did the same. The activities related to the web portal included the visit of UIUC’s IT team to site libraries in China; discussion and selection of target databases and applicable software with the intention of open-source tools; communicating during the process and assisting with technical issues. After the project was extended, a new program for IT teams from two site libraries was added. While the web contents are the ultimate outcome of the pilot, the process itself can also provide valuable experience in developing multi-language databases from libraries in different countries.

Two IT team visits to China site libraries were made, the first was made in the beginning of the project; the second was towards the end of the project. The web portal team from two Chinese site libraries also visited UIUC to share the development of the sites and to discuss issues.
Project Accomplishments

The project designed educational programs in China and the United States to encourage mutual understanding between librarians in the U.S. and China and promote awareness of diversity to overcome cultural barriers for U.S. librarians in serving user communities.

Goal One had four objectives; three for US visits by Chinese librarians and one for visits to China. This section will compare the first three objectives and their successes.

Objective 1: Developing professional development programs for Chinese library leaders and library educators focusing on global information issues and a global approach to librarianship;

Objective 2: Placing Chinese librarians at U.S. institutions for a host visit so they can share information with their U.S. colleagues;

Objective 3: Having Chinese librarians attend a conference in the U.S. to present a session on resources available in China;

Inauguration of the Chinese program on May 18, 2009
in the National Library of China in Beijing
Liu Xiaojin from MOC, Tang Gensheng from LSC, Yan Xiangdong from NLC attended the program
A total of 51 librarians from China (including 3 observers), in five groups, had a total of 1515 encounters in meetings and tours over a four-year period. Most of these librarians were directors or deputy directors of public and provincial libraries. There were a few professors and government officials (librarians who work at the Library Society of China).

All of the objectives were met. Professional development programs were created and presented to the groups while they were at the UIUC campus. They all visited a host library and gave presentations there. They also attended the annual meeting of the American Library Association. At the ALA meeting in 2010, Wu Yue from the Library Society of China, Shuyong Jiang from the UIUC, and Kevin Cherry from IMLS gave a presentation about the project. In 2012, Shuyong Jiang presented at IRRT pre-conference session on collaboration and project activities.

Each of these groups was asked at the end of their three-weeks in the US to evaluate the visit. Based on their comments, we can conclude that we did a great job in providing opportunities answer their specific questions, such as library services to children and teens, preservation of materials, and library management.

One of the common complaints in each group was the lack of time to get in-depth knowledge of the libraries that they visited, particularly at their host sites. One group, in 2010, for example, visited 10 libraries in five days! After learning about this complaint, we attempted to find hosts who were able to give the guests the in-depth knowledge they desired. Skokie Public Library, which hosted twice, was a great example of this.

Chicago public library Chinatown branch is one of the most visited sites for the Chinese librarian. Four of the five Chinese delegations of the project visited this library and were impressed by the work and service the library offered to the Chinatown community in Chicago.

Closing Ceremony, 2012
Objective 4: Developing a cadre of U.S. librarians who will provide professional development in China and also develop collaborative programs between institutions;

There have been 20 professional development seminars in China over the last four years. A total of forty-two individuals travelled to China. Forty-one presented at these seminars (five of these people, sometimes six, plus the evaluator, went multiple times as leaders of the groups). As the evaluator of the project stated: All of the 41 team members have done an outstanding job with the highest professional standard and commitment to excellence. As a whole, they represented the U.S. well and, rightfully, with high pride for a job well done.

The seminars in China were very popular; however, there were a few complaints. Among the issues were long lectures with very little question and answer time; not enough time to cover the material; not enough handouts for the audiences; and the inability to see the PowerPoint presentations from the back of a large hall. In some trips, the presenters also asked for more collaboration before the trip so there is no redundancy.
Goal Two was to enhance communication between U.S. and Chinese librarians with a view to developing and disseminating resources that can be of use to the library community in the U.S.

Objective 5:

- Promoting international standards and best practices related to digital content creation, description, dissemination, and preservation through training programs offered to Chinese librarians responsible for digital content development and digital libraries;
- Identifying and establishing a registry of digital library projects and/or significant digital assets housed at Chinese institutions relevant to the study of China;
Establishing a pilot Web-based portal at two sites to be selected for Chinese-language information resources and services in order to facilitate access by non-Chinese-language speakers and enhance sharing resources and expertise related to China-related and Chinese information resources;

In the last two years of the project, the project mainly worked on adding collections and contents. Designing and customizing the portal search and browse page and a full records displaying page. At the end of the project, the metadata of over 2,500 images and related information from Northeast Normal University in Changchun, China and Suzhou Public Library, Suzhou, China, were translated into English. The pilot Web Portal website is found here: (http://xtf.grainger.illinois.edu:8080/china/search).

Two IT trips to China were made, one in 2009 and one in 2012. The initial trip consisted of Shuyong Jiang, project PI; Sarah Shreeves, UIUC IT team member; and Win Shih, a guest consultant. This visit started the conversation between the two site Chinese libraries and UIUC team. The team held intensive discussions with staff members of the two hosting sites and reviewed the hardware and software used for their digital collections during our visit. At the end, the partners agreed to limit the portal contents to local history and culture.

After looking into different web tools for the project, the Web Portal team decided to use the open source software eXtensible Text Framework (XTF) as the tool for the portal. The team selected this tool for the advantage of enabling easy access to the cultural and historical records from the E-photo Gallery of Northeast China Collection provided by Northeast Normal University in Changchun, China and the Old Suzhou City Collection provided by Suzhou Library in Suzhou, China.

In September 2011, four Chinese librarians from the two Chinese institutions visited the US. Most of the meetings with University of Illinois staff were to discuss the Web Portal. They also visited libraries in Chicago and New York City, as well as OCLC in Columbus, OH. When the group was on the UIUC campus, some samples of UIUC Library’s other digital projects were shared with them to give a sense of how the portal fits into the big picture. We also shared the XTF documentations with them. In addition to demonstrating the XTF and how it works, we also identified some issues to discuss with the Chinese colleagues during their visit. These included:

- Metadata, including adding more elements; using controlled vocabulary in subject fields, and improving metadata schema.
- Display of the portal
- Translations
- Access restrictions

Their visit was successful. Suzhou Library has also found some other useful tools in developing their digital collection. Northeastern China Normal University Library is also more willing to sharing their collections that can be made Open Access and can be accessed around the world.

Beth Sandore and Shuyong Jiang visited two site libraries towards the end of the project in May 2012. Suzhou Library IT team shared the progress of the portal after they returned from their visit in 2011. They implemented not only the XTF with the portal contents, but also the MOD technology in their digital projects. The Northeastern China Normal University Library shared their digital collections and also their trial use of the new library system, Primo. Beth and Shuyong found a high degree of similarities in library operations between the two countries, at least in university libraries. In both Suzhou and Changchun, Beth gave presentations on topics including digitalization, library consortium, and also shared several UIUC’s digital projects. Shuyong gave presentations on U.S. public library service.

The portal had a slow start due to the time taken in selecting the right databases and suitable web tools. Translation was also a time-consuming task. The amount of the contents included in the portal is preliminary. While Chinese site libraries have developed their own platforms, the project portal site will need continuing technical and personnel support to sustain after the project.

Significant Findings & Sustainable Outcomes

Thorough Preparation & Planning

For a project this big and complex, there are always unexpected issues that arise. Careful planning and good preparation can help us to stay efficient and flexible while carrying out the project goals and objectives. In the first year, the UIUC project team held monthly meetings to plan and review all the steps, lay out timelines for all tasks, and document procedures.

Before every trip, the project team gathered the presentation team together to have a pre-trip training session. We understood the first trip would set the tone, so a 3-day workshop was organized April 5-8, 2009 for the first team. During the training, the group discussed characteristics of American public libraries and exchanged ideas and methods for good presentations to engage the audience. The team members all agreed this was very helpful. As Susan Schnuer, the project Co-PI for the May group indicated: “Having the team come together before the trip was an excellent opportunity to bond as a group and to develop common themes.”

Communication

Communication is the key to successful collaborations. The communication model developed over the course of the project between Project Director Shuyong Jiang and her counterpart in the LSC continues to move smoothly and a good deal of trust has been built. This helped the project deal with many unexpected changes and fostered good partnership. During the U.S. Opening Ceremony, the UIUC team met with IMLS and MOC to openly discuss the issues in developing the web portal. There were also special meetings with the Library Directors Group. Beth Sandore gave an overview of the web portal project. The UIUC team and Chinese participants had good conversations about focusing on cultural and openly-available resources as critical to the web portal.

Publicity

The Project utilized many means to promote the project.

Web Presence

The project established a bi-lingual web site to provide basic information for the project, events, and calendars. It also provides a link to LSC site of the project. It is frequently updated and serves as a tool to publicize the project.
Conference Presentations

The project also made several presentations at conferences including the ALA annual conference, Library Society of China annual conferences; and poster presentations in IFLA and ALA.

Engaged Audience

The project had an amazing audience, either the Chinese librarian participants in Chinese programs or the American librarians participating in hosting or serving as presenters. In China, every seminar location we went, people came to express their desires for more projects like this. As Win Shih indicated after his trip to China, he was “impressed by Chinese librarians’ eagerness and willingness to work with and learn from U.S.” In E&P program in China, there were a lot of good interactions and discussions among US presenters and Chinese participants.

More activities generated

More forms of collaboration and professional development activities were generated by the project.

Invitations to speakers for professional events in China—several presenters were also invited to speak at other professional events outside of the project. Karen Wei and Clement Lau were invited to Tianjin in 2011; and Lina Ding and Angela Yang were to Foshan.

Turning presentations into papers—several presenters were also invited to publish their presentations on leading Chinese library journals. For example, Hung-yun Chang, Haiwang Yuan, Shuyong Jiang, Wenwen Zhang, and Lisa Zhao have turned their presentation into papers which were published in Library & Information (Lanzhou) in 2009 and 2010. Karen Wei, Xiaofang Han and Kuei Chiu had their papers published in The Library Journal of Shangdong in 2010.

More collaborative events—the project also generated other collaboration interests. For example, Li Yonghui, a member of 2010 Chinese group and a Chinese rare book specialist, was invited to another grant event at the Freer Library to do a workshop on Chinese rare books.

Conclusions

The project offered an excellent opportunity for librarians from both countries to share, collaborate, and innovate. It opened more possibilities, drew interest, and set up examples for international collaboration. In Beijing the project was highlighted as one of the efforts for internationalization and globalization in librarianship by Qiang Zhu, the Director of Peking University Library, in his address at the conference for the 100th Anniversary of the National Library of China. In our networked information landscape, the world continues to become smaller and more connected. The project portal, leveraging digital technology and standards, will definitely contribute to the mutual understanding and trust of both countries in sharing information and resources.

In his final evaluation, Dr. Lee commented: “Based on the evaluation of all data collected on the project over the four-year period it is obvious that the TGAG Project as a whole has been most successfully implemented. There are many reasons for the successes. Perhaps the most important one is the outstanding leadership provided by the University of Illinois and the excellent support provided by the Chinese American Librarians Association. The UIUC leadership group, under the guidance of the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Services, has worked well with its Chinese partner, the Library Society of China, under the guidance of the Chinese Ministry of Culture. Dr. Shuyong Jiang, the TGAG Project PI, has played a key role in the detailed implementation of the entire project and should be recognized for her extraordinary contributions. As a direct result of the joint efforts between UIUC and LSC in both countries, both of the goals of the TGAG Project have to a large extent been met or perhaps exceeded.”

The success of this project would not have been possible without the help of many public and academic libraries in both China and the U.S. CALA played a particularly important role. Many of our members served as presenters in China and also hosted Chinese librarians in the U.S. We are confident collaboration between U.S. and Chinese libraries will likely continue in many different forms.

This year, four of ALA’s Emerging Leaders will be working on CALA’s oral history project by producing videos of two outstanding CALA members who have made significant contributions to the library and information science field. The two individuals are Dr. Lois Mai Chan, Professor Emeritus at the University of Kentucky’s School of Library and Information Science and author of Cataloging and Classification: An Introduction, and Dr. Tze-chung Li, Dean Emeritus of the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at Dominican University.

The four Emerging Leaders selected by ALA come from different libraries and locations; Sam Suber from Montana State Library, Monnee Tong from San Diego Public Library, Leila June Rod-Welch from University of Northern Iowa, and Raymond Pun from New York University Shanghai. Their goals are to record an interview of the two CALA members and produce a short documentary for CALA, in celebrating the 40th anniversary of the association.
Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee and the Special Chinese Collections in the Library of Congress

Judy S. Lu (盧雪鄉)
Former Head, Collection Services, Asian Division, the Library of Congress

On Monday, Jun 24, of this year CALA President Esther Lee announced to CALA colleagues and friends that the CALA Presidential Initiatives Task Force made special efforts to produce two commemorative items in helping to celebrate CALA’s 40th anniversary. These two items are:

A special issue of Spotlight on a CALA Member – Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee, can be seen at http://cala-web.org/files/spotlight/DrLee.pdf; and a video on The Life of Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee: A Scholar, A Library Leader and an Ambassador (李華偉博士之旅：學者，圖書界泰斗，文化使者), at http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2w7qXQPbhE

“Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee is one of the CALA founders. In celebrating the happy occasion of CALA’s 40th birthday, we want to show our admiration and respect for Dr. Lee through the special issue of Spotlight on him and through the video of his life.” said CALA President Esther Lee.

The CALA members paid their respects to Dr. Lee as the highlight of CALA’s 40th birthday, and then followed that by a series of splendid CALA 40th anniversary events during the ALA Annual Conference in Chicago on June 30, 2013. Based on the many complimentary remarks expressed by the viewers of the video about Dr. Lee, no one should doubt his world-renowned reputation for being an outstanding scholar, a library leader, and an ambassador for the East-West cultural exchange. However, these achievements are only one part of his long and productive professional life. The purpose of this article is to focus on (1) the administrative and organizational improvement Dr. Lee made at the Asian Division, the Library of Congress; and (2) the impact of the historically important programs that the Asian Division sponsored during his tenure. Even after he retired, he maintained a sense of mission to preserve the culturally and historically important Asian materials and urged the division staff to continue their efforts in this area. As a result, the most unique collections/materials were brought to the Library after many programs were initiated (see Photo 1).

Working for Dr. Lee just a short time after his arrival in 2003, many LC colleagues, including me, admired his creative management style. He could make an unenthusiastic worker into a productive employee within a short time. He reorganized the structure of the Asian Division, emphasizing cooperation and harmony. He provided clear definition of work assignments and encouraged team work efforts.
During the five-year tenure, Dr. Lee encountered many difficult work-related situations. In order to solve these problems, Dr. Lee came up with ten initiatives that totally reorganized the Asian Division. He implemented state-of-the-art improvements for personnel management, administrative procedures, and the preservation of the unique collections in various Asian languages. He worked to fill the vacant positions according to the needs of the Division. He publicly recruited the most capable candidates and instigated awards for employees who performed above and beyond their regular duties. The ten initiatives are listed below.

1. He revised acquisitions plans in order to acquire the efficient online databases in the Chinese, Japanese, and Korean languages.
2. He revised acquisition methods and procedures using the financial support of the Luce Foundation.
3. He improved the communication and contact between the Asian Division and the LC’s field offices in the South Asia and Southeast Asia areas.
4. He opened the Asian Reading Room on Saturdays in order for more readers to use the Asian collections.
5. He established the Asian Division Friends Society in order to increase scholarly activities and to promote the Division’s collections and services.
6. He increased fundraising in order to set up more research fellowships.
7. He improved the Asian collections, and also established a new Asian American Pacific Islander Collection.
8. He oversaw efforts to reorganize the book deck and to send out un-cataloged periodicals for cataloging.
9. He oversaw the updating of the serial check-in system from a manually operated procedure to an online check-in system.
10. He fostered collaboration with the national libraries of the People’s Republic of China, Japan, Korean, and the Republic of China to digitize the unique rare materials in each library in order to make this information available to readers in all of these libraries.

Among many projects and programs that were initiated and completed during Dr. Lee’s tenure 2003-2008, five are considered to be the most noteworthy (1) Created the Florence Tan Moeson $300,000 Fellowships and Collection Preservation Fund; (2) Established the Asian-American Pacific Islander Collection; (3) Initiated international partnership for the largest Chinese rare book digitization project; (4) Conversion of East Asian serials online check-in procedure; (5) Established the Asian Division Friends Society.

(1) Created the Florence Tan Moeson $300,000 Fellowships and Collection Preservation Fund
In the fundraising, LC colleagues Paul Ho and Anna Ho were very helpful to introduce LC retired cataloger Florence Tan Moeson to Dr. Lee. Ms. Moeson was a devout Christian and wanted to reciprocate to society for her good fortune. When she heard from the Ho’s that Dr. Lee was an outstanding administrator for the Asian Division, she was proud that an outstanding Chinese American such as Dr. Lee was being recognized by LC. To show her appreciation she expressed her interest in donating funds to support his activities. Ms. Moeson was fond of me personally because I could communicate with her in Cantonese dialect, our mother tongue, and I visited her often at her senior apartment. I accompanied Dr. Lee for many of his visits to Ms. Moeson throughout the entire process of obtaining the donation. In 2005 Ms. Moeson agreed to donate $30,000 each year for ten years for three categories of activities: (a) $14,000 to create ten or more fellowships to use the Asian collections; (b) $7,000 to hire librarians with Asian language expertise to organize the un-cataloged Asian materials; (c) $9,000 to purchase rare or unique Asian materials. These activities were implemented during Dr. Lee’s tenure. However, since Dr. Lee retired, the collection preservation funds were no longer being utilized, and as a result, valuable materials that need to be preserved were unable to be protected.

(2) Established the Asian-American Pacific Islander Collection
The United States is an immigrant country. Asians, particularly Chinese immigrants, had come to this country in the 18th Century, and actively participated in the development of the Country. But they did not receive the equal treatments like the European immigrants in the early years, nor their achievement and contributions were properly recorded in the American history. After getting the support from the Chairman Congressman Mike Honda of the Congressional Asian American Caucus, and the approval of funding from LC officials, the AAPIC was officially established, and a librarian who is an expert in this area was selected in 2007. Dr. Lee not only put in a great deal of effort to establish the guidelines for this Collection, he also set up a foundation fund for it by donating $10,000 himself, which led to more donations from the colleagues in the Asian Division and others.

Cong. Mike Honda was very pleased by Dr. Lee’s efforts for AAPIS Collection, and for the entire Asian Division, he submitted a statement to praise Dr. Lee. This statement appeared in the April 10th, 2008 issue of the Congressional Record:

(“Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the many contributions and achievements of Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee. After an esteemed 5 years as the chief of the Asian Division at the Library of Congress—a bookend to his dedicated 50 years in the library profession, Dr. Lee is retiring. ...

During his short tenure at the Library of Congress, Dr. Lee focused his energy on completely rejuvenating and reorganizing the Asian Division. He introduced innovative programs designed to improve and expand the division’s resources, collections, services, and outreach. As chair of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, it has been my privilege to have collaborated with Dr. Lee and his dedicated staff at the Asian Division. Our shared pursuit to tell the complete Asian American and Pacific Islander, AAPI, story and dispel the cloak of invisibility and mischaracterization upon the community has given life to a new AAPI Collection at the Library of Congress. This is another milestone of Dr. Lee’s storied career.

Dr. Lee and his lovely wife Mary will soon move to Florida to bask in the sunny rays of retirement. But I suspect that he will not slow down, and will continue his many pursuits. As anyone who has met Dr. Lee can attest, his boundless, enthusiastic spirit will not allow him to stay idle. ...

Madam Speaker, I commend Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee for his dedication and many contributions to the library profession and am especially grateful for his nurturing leadership of the Asian Division and of the establishment of the AAPI Collection at the Library of Congress. ...

Dr. James H. Billington, Librarian of Congress, also praised Dr. Lee for his outstanding services for the Asian Division at the farewell party at the end of March, 2008. (See Photo 2.)

(3) Initiated International Partnership for the Largest Chinese Rare Book Digitization Project

The joint venture of the National Central Library of the Republic of China (Taiwan) and the Library of Congress for digitizing over 2,000 Chinese rare books of LC is a success story in every aspect. To this day, it is the biggest international partnership yet for digitizing rare materials in the library community.

The idea of digitizing Chinese rare books began in 2004. Dr. Lee first discussed it with Dr. Fang-Rung Juang, the Director of the National Central Library of ROC, who showed strong interest, but LC had no funds to finance the project at the time. In 2005, Dr. Juang led a delegation of Taiwan librarians to attend ALA and visited LC afterward. At Dr. Lee’s request, Dr. James Billington, the Librarian of Congress, hosted a luncheon for the delegation and had pleasant conversations with Dr. Juang. At the meeting, Dr. Juang mentioned that NCL had just completed its digitization of rare books and still had some funding left. He proposed a joint project between LC and NCL to digitize Chinese rare books at the Library of Congress not held by NCL. Materials digitized would include pre-1795 block printed editions and for manuscripts, no date restriction. Dr. Juang generously offered to have NCL bear the entire cost of the project, including the cost of sending a team of experienced technicians with appropriate equipment to LC. Both Dr. Billington and Dr. Lee were impressed by the generosity of the National Central Library.

Because it was an unprecedented international partnership, completion of the paperwork took a year, and the project was officially started in the fall of 2006. Dr. Lee appointed Head of Scholarly Services Dr. Mi Chu to be in charge of the project. In order to ensure the quality of selection, Chinese rare book expert Mr. Bang-jin Fan was hired with the financial support of the Chiang Ching Kuo Foundation. The responsibility for selecting the rare books for digitization was shared by Mr. Fan, Mi Chu and a China Area Specialist. In 2007, the agreement was revised and renewed first by LC, and then agreed upon and signed by NCL Director General, Dr. Kuan-chung Huang. In the meantime, NCL sent to LC all of the needed high-tech digitization equipment and three well-qualified technicians to perform various tasks of digitization procedures. successor Hsiao-ming Yu was in charge of the planning and operation from Taipei. This project took seven years to complete (2005-2012). This grand scale rare book digitization project is the most commendable act of commitment of Dr. Fang-Rung Juang, Dr. Kuan-chung Huang and later Dr. Shu-hsien Tseng. Researchers and scholars for many generations to come will be benefitted by this visionary act of NCL.

The project outcome of 2025 titles of digitized images out of about 4000 rare Chinese books at the Library of Congress can now be accessed through NCL’s website at http://rbook2.ncl.edu.tw/, which includes fully digitized 7,700 rare Chinese books from the NCL, 382 titles from the University of Washington, and 294 titles from the University of California at Berkeley. If you prefer to search for Library of Congress materials only, there can be accessed directly through the following link: http://rbook2.ncl.edu.tw/Search/SearchList?whereString=ICYgQHNvdXjZV9zb3VvY2UgICLiJi6TnsY3IvbHl0g4_mqqLntKLos4fmlpnuqsi0&SourceID=1

(4) Conversion of East Asian serials online check-in procedure.
The conversion of 2,200 plus Asian serials check-in from manual operation to the state-of-the-art online check-in system in 2006 was a major breakthrough for the Library of Congress. When LC converted English and other languages serials check-in in the early 90s, not all of the Asian language capability was available online. As a result, all of the Asian language serials were left behind, and the time-consuming manual operation continued until Dr. Lee convinced the Associate Librarian for Library Services, Deanna Marcum, to provide $250,000 for this project. As a result, the Asian Division now has its own high-tech online serial check-in system.

(5) Established the Asian Division Friends Society
The experience of establishing a friends’ society for the University of Ohio Library was so successful that Dr. Lee decided to do the same for the Asian Division. The establishment of the Asian Division Friends’ Society (ADFS) allowed the staff to conduct many more outreach activities and joint ventures with the local Asian American communities. It also provided great number of opportunity to publicize the rich Asian collections and the newly established Asian American Pacific Islander Collection. Additionally, it led to many more cultural and scholarly programs. The result was the increase of readership at the Asian Reading Room and more use of the Asian collections.

The Asian collections of the Library of Congress have a lengthy history. According to the early annual reports of the Library, the first group of Asian books that came to the Division could be traced back to 1865. These books were transferred from the Smithsonian Institute to LC. The topics are about the Southeast Asia countries and the islands of the Pacific Ocean. They were purchased during the Wilkes Explorer Expedition in 1838-1842 in Singapore. Four years later, in 1869, the Emperor of China Tongzhi donated ten titles with a total of 933 volumes of valuable rare books to the people of the United States. In 1875 LC began to set up a material exchange system with the Government of Japan. Since then the LC collection materials in Asian languages, including minority tribal languages, have been coming in from every area of Asia.

The Library’s tireless acquisition efforts in early years have created the most valuable Asian rare book collections in the world. Therefore, the most important asset of the Asian Division is its unique collections. Because of the long history of the Library of Congress of over two hundred years, and its Jeffersonian policy for collecting research materials in all languages of the world, LC possesses the largest number of books and other written materials in the world. The Asian collections are also the largest and the best in the Western Hemisphere. For further information about the Asian collections please check: http://www.loc.gov/rr/asian/

This article not only depicts the many major projects and programs that Dr. Lee accomplished during his tenure as the Chief of the Asian Division from 2003 to 2008, it also will highlight Dr. Lee’s everlasting influence on the people with whom he worked have a sense of mission to preserve the culturally or historically important Asian materials. Being an experienced administrative librarian, Dr. Lee immediately identified that one of his major assignments was to take on major collection management projects for the Asian collections since 1995, apart from my being the China Area Specialist. Several collection specialists like me were also inspired to take the initiative to sponsor culturally and historically important programs that would bring unique materials to the Asian Division. There were also instances when research requests came in from Congressional Members, and we provided the pertinent information by researching through our rich Asian collections. In 2007, such an important research project occurred.
House Resolution on Comfort Women in WWII (Introduced in 110th Congress, 2007)
Congressman Mike Honda of California, who had given tremendous support to Dr. Lee for establishing the Asian American and Pacific Islander Collection in the Asian Division previously, called Dr. Lee one morning requesting the Asian Division staff to provide him with historical information about the “comfort women” whom were drafted in China, Korea, Taiwan and other Asian countries during WWII. I was assigned as the coordinator for this project. Within days all of the important documents on the comfort women in Asia from six sections of the Asian Division were submitted to the Congressman’s office.

Subsequently, Congressman Honda introduced H.Res. 121 during the 110th Congress in 2007. Its title is: "A resolution expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the Government of Japan should formally acknowledge, apologize, and accept historical responsibility in a clear and unequivocal manner for its Imperial Armed Forces’ coercion of young women into sexual slavery, known to the world as "comfort women", during its colonial and wartime occupation of Asia and the Pacific Islands from the 1930s through the duration of World War II."

H.Res. 121 certainly was one of the Congressman’s major achievements that helped to bring out this un-just portion of history to the attention of the world. In recent months the “comfort women” issue was brought up again as a “hot topic” in the global political arena. For example, City of Glendale, CA had a bronze statue erected at the Town Center acknowledging thousands of Asian women forced by the Japanese Army to be sex slaves, commonly called “comfort women.” Among those who attended the ceremony was a Korean comfort woman Bok-dong Kim who has traveled globally to tell her sad story of a “comfort woman.” She was also attended the H. Res. 121 Congressional hearings in 2007. Another sad news is that the first Chinese comfort woman Wan Ai-hua (万爱花) who initiated the first law suit against the Japanese Government, and led many comfort women traveling to Japan to appear in courts. Unfortunately, she died on September 4th this year, and no law suit has been won.

The information about H. Res 121 can be found at http://thomas.loc.gov. Under “More Legislative Information”, click “Search bill text for multiple congresses”, then click on 110th Congress, and search HRes121 or “comfort women” and the legislation can then be viewed.

Unsung Heroes: A Symposium on the Heroism of Asian Pacific Americans During WWII
(Symposium held on October 26, 2009, morning session)
There is another current “hot topic” that many groups of people, including movie directors, would like to pursue, that is the stories of the “Flying Tigers” of WWII. The heroic image of the Flying Tigers was worshiped by people of many countries, especially Chinese and Americans. However, it seemed that there had not been a single cultural institution that took the initiative to invite these surviving Flying Tigers to give their personal accounts about their personal experience in carrying out unusually dangerous missions. This major international symposium took place on October 26, 2009 at the Library of Congress. Many Flying Tigers such as Sen. Ted Stevens, Gen. John Alison, Gen. Fred Chiao (喬無遏), John Gong (representing his grandfather), and Madame Anna Chennault came to speak at the symposium. All of these aging flying tiger veterans were pleased that their heroic stories will be forever preserved in the LC’s permanent video recordings. At this special occasion, the Veterans Association of the Republic of China awarded each Flying Tiger with a medal to commemorate the history of US-China strong allegiance during WWII (see Photo 3).

Dr. Lee had retired from the Library a few months before the program, but he was pleased that I continued his spirit for preserving the significant historical material. He therefore came back to greet the speakers, and played an important role at the program.

For researchers who are interested in finding the video for this symposium, they can go to LC homepage: [http://www.loc.gov], at the dropdown menu “All formats” on top of page, select “Film, video” and search for “Flying Tigers”, the first item is the “Unsung Heroes” program. All of the Flying Tigers spoke in the morning session, other Asian American heroes and Congressional Members spoke in the afternoon session.

Prior to the symposium, the Asian Division received a valuable donation of 250 plus items about the history of the Flying Tigers from the Flying Tigers Museum in Hua-lian (花蓮), Taiwan. This collection includes presidential proclamation, official awards and documents, memoirs, photos of Gen. Chennault and the Flying Tigers, etc. This historically unique collection was authorized to donate to LC by the Minister of Defense, ROC.

Confucianism as a World Cultural Heritage
(Symposium held on September 11 & September 15, 2010)
This two-day symposium was held for the purpose of implementing congressional H. Res. 784 which was sponsored by forty-two Congressional Members, and for the purpose of commemorating the great achievements of the great thinker and philosopher Confucius, whose teachings and philosophy have steered Chinese minds since 500 B.C. and influenced the wider world’s civilization for the past several hundred years.

The keynote speaker was Cong. Al Green, who was the first initiator of H. Res. 784 on “The Congressional Recognition of Confucius Teachings.” Then renowned scholar Dr. Paul Youshing Shao spoke on “Confucius: The Man and His Lasting Influence,” world renowned scholar Hsu Cho-Yun spoke on “Confucius: Ideas and Values in the Age of Globalization.” Also, the recipient of the Library of Congress John W. Kluge Prize for lifetime achievement in the study of humanity Prof. Ying-shih Yu wrote profound thoughts on “Confucianism” in the program brochure. At the program closing, Congresswoman Judy Chu spoke on “The Impact of the Teachings of Confucius to the Chinese Americans’ Thinking.”

The Asian Division was extremely honored that Confucius’s 76th Generation Descendant Mrs. Kung, Ling-Ho donated a hard-bound 80-volume “Confucius’ Family Genealogy” to the Chinese Collection.

Republic of China (Taiwan) Presidential Election 2004 Collection
Since the United States is one of the main allies of the Republic of China on Taiwan, and the Congress shows intense interest in the democratic progress of this island, therefore, it is required of the Library of Congress to send a China/Taiwan Area Specialist to attend the presidential election activities during the election process once every four years. I was assigned to cover the 2004 presidential election. Because of the fact that the outcome of this election was rather unusual, 500 plus pieces of campaign literature were brought back from Taiwan. For researchers who are interested in finding these materials via the Library of Congress Online Catalog, if you look under the title, you can find:

[Taiwan Presidential Election 2004, Newspaper Reports]. 3 vols. (505 items)
[Taiwan Presidential Election and National Referendum: Eye Witness Account of Facts and Issues of the Events on March 20, 2004]. By Judy S. Lu
Under subject: Elections – Taiwan, 107 items listed.
Under subject: Presidents – Taiwan – Elections, two titles were found for 1996 and 2000 elections.

An International Symposium on the Significance of Admiral Zheng He’s Voyages (1405-1433). Symposium held on May 16, 2005. In commemoration of the 600th anniversary of Zheng He’s first voyage in 1405, the Asian Division of the Library of Congress presented a group of Zheng He scholars that included an oceanographer and hydraulic engineer, a retired British Royal Navy captain, historians, scholars of the Ming Dynasty, and other researchers who spent years researching various aspects of Zheng He’s expeditions. Our rich Chinese collection has been frequently used by scholars to research this issue, among them Louise Levathes, who acknowledged the Library of Congress’ contribution in her book [When China Ruled the Seas: the Treasure Fleet of the Dragon Throne, 1405-1433].

Because of this symposium, an additional 60 plus titles were added to the Chinese Collection.

Translation and Digitization of Naxi Manuscripts (1998-2001)
The Naxi Collection in the Asian Division consists of 3,342 plus manuscripts, both originals and photostat copies of original manuscripts. These manuscripts, written by Naxi Dongbas, shamanistic priests, document the unique cosmology of the Naxi people, illustrate a range of Naxi myths and legends including the story of the creation of the world, sacrifice to the Serpent King and other principal gods, accounts of Naxi warriors and other people of high social standing ascending to the realm of deities, and love-suicide stories. Joseph Rock was the first American who studied and interpreted Naxi writings. His first article on the subject was published in National Geographic magazine in 1924. During his 24 years in China Mr. Rock amassed a collection of some 7,500 manuscripts. There are 2,228 pieces of Naxi manuscripts of LC was purchased from Mr.Rock. The other 1,114 pieces of the Collection were donated by Quentin Roosevelt, the grandson of President Theodore Roosevelt.

In 1998, China Area Specialist Dr. Mi Chu received funding from Chiang Ching Kuo Foundation for International Scholarly Exchange for translating the entire Naxi manuscript collection to the Chinese language. Naxi language expert Prof. Zhu Baotian was invited from Yunnan Province to take on this project. In 2001, the translation project was completed. This project attracted great interest in the scholarly community.

During the tenure of Dr. Lee, digitization of the Naxi Collection was one of his priorities because of the uniqueness of this pictographic language and the culture it represents. A digital database, entitled Selections from the Naxi Manuscript Collection is available on the Library’s website. (http://international.loc.gov/intldl/naxihtml/naxihome.html)

In the Footsteps of Marco Polo: An International Symposium and A Special Book Exhibit on Italy-China Cultural Exchange in the 13th-17th Centuries. Symposium held on Thursday, March 23, 2006.

This symposium was a joint venture of the Asian Division and the Italian Embassy. Asian Division Chief Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee gave the opening remarks, Head of Scholarly Services Dr. Mi Chu introduced the well-known Italian historian Dr. Piero Corradini who spoke on "Marco Polo and Other Italians in China in the XIV Century". Later, Rev. John Witek, Ph.D., professor of East Asian History, Georgetown University, spoke on "Through an Italian Lens: Viewing Books on Sixteenth and Seventeenth-Century China in the Library of Congress". Another speaker, Dr. Kam-wing Fung of the University of Hong Kong, delivered a speech on "Lexicography, Cartography and Instrument Making: Matteo Ricci and Jesuit Science in China."

In support of this symposium, hundreds of manuscripts and books on the history of Jesuit science in China were displayed. Also, an image of Matteo Ricci’s World Map published in China in 1602 was used for the program flyer. In the Library of Congress Online Catalog, under the keyword “Marco Polo and China” there are 123 titles are listed.

A Bridge between Cultures: Commemorating the Two-Hundredth Anniversary of Robert Morrison’s Arrival in China. A book display sponsored by the Asian Division, the Oxford Centre for the Study of Christianity in China, and the Confucius Institute at the University of Maryland, was held on March 15, 2007.

A newly published annotated catalogue of the 19th Century missionary work in Chinese at the Asian Division entitled “Christianity in China” compiled by Mi Chu and Man Shun Yeung was in the book display. In the Library of Congress Online Catalog, under the keyword “Christianity in China” 382 titles are listed.

Apart from the above mentioned programs and projects, Dr. Lee also authorized funds from the Florence Tan Moeson Collection Preservation Funds to preserve two other special collections. These collections are:

1. Hong Kong Ephemera Collection

   There are 39 groups of books, documents, and magazines that were collected during the transition period of changing the sovereignty of Hong Kong from the United Kingdom to PRC from 1996 to 1997. I was sent to Hong Kong to collect books, magazines, HK Government documents, writings about social changes, photographs of political demonstrations, etc. Also, there are about 5,000 newspaper articles from Hong Kong online newspapers that were collected from 1996 to 1999 for the purpose of recording the changes in the society in Hong Kong. These newspapers are kept in Deck 50 in the Jefferson Building.

   For researchers who want to see this special collection, go to Library of Congress Homepage: http://www.loc.gov, use the keyword search from the Library of Congress Catalogs, type in: Hong Kong Ephemera Collection (Library of Congress.) For librarian’s assistance, please go to LC Homepage, at “Ask a Librarian.” write an email to the Chinese Reference Librarian in the Asian Division for help.

2. Macau Returns to China Collection

   After the Opium War, the weak Qing Dynasty was forced to give Macau to Portugal in 1845. Four hundred and forty two years of Portuguese rule, Macau was returned to China in 1999. During the transition period of changing the sovereignty, the method of observing the changing of society was by acquiring books about Macau during the period of 1998 to 2000.

   Researchers can type in “Macau -- Sovereignty” as subject keyword in LC Catalogs to retrieve 11 titles.

As librarians we feel strongly about building useful historical collections for library patrons to use. What Dr. Lee did in the Library of Congress has set an unprecedented example for all of us to follow. While we are pleased that these materials were collected and preserved, we are also certain that researchers and librarians will be benefited by these special collections for many generations to come.

Quite a number of other VIPs and sponsors, such as Maureen Sullivan (2010-2013 ALA President) and Keith Michael Fiels (ALA Executive Director) was invited or wanted to join us, but because of the conflict of schedule, they can only be with us in spirit. However, we still have more people in attendance than those for the past few years, and based on the smiles on their faces, in addition to the high compliments they gave, they must have enjoyed the Celebration tremendously.

The Masters of Ceremony for the evening was Min Chou (CALA Immediate Past President), Dora Ho (ALA Executive Board Member), and Manuel Urrizola (Head of Metadata and Technical Services, University of California, Riverside Libraries). They established a delightful atmosphere, and introduced with verve various items in the program which included:

A welcome to the attendees, an introduction of the VIPs, a toast to the 40th Anniversary Celebration, followed by a Lion Dance performed by the Chicago Chinese Cultural Center Lion Dance Troupe. While the lion danced and pranced in different directions, exuding happiness, people put red envelopes (with money inside) into the lion’s mouth for good luck to the attendees. The joy of the moment was caught on video (now in YouTube) by Denise Kwan, a CALA Board Member: http://youtu.be/WQqfVxj4q2c

The Awards presentation showcased four beautiful plaques for the four very deserving members who have contributed a lot to CALA for the past several years: Min Chou for the prestigious CALA Distinguished Service Award; Sai Deng, Maria Fung and Michael Bailou Huang for the President’s Recognition Awards.

Other recipients present included:

Dr. Tze-chung Li: He received the Outstanding Leadership Award in Memory of Dr. Margaret C. Fung. That Award came with $1,000.00. A Certificate of Appreciation was also given to him for his being one of the founding fathers and years of service to CALA.

Featured Report

Haipeng Li: He received a Certificate of Appreciation for his outstanding service to CALA and for being its excellent Executive Director for the past five years.

All recipients took pictures with the two presenters, President Esther Lee, and Executive Director Haipeng Li.

To further enthrall our attendees, there were:

Two young dancers from the Jin Qiu Dance Group, dressed in elaborate, colorful and lovely costumes, and danced gracefully to Chinese music.

June Zhang, the delegation head from China, led a group of 30 librarians from various parts of China to sing some exquisite folk songs. They have come to study for the summer at the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign.

Dr. Hsuchyu Chen, the delegation head from Taiwan, led another group (of nine) from Taiwan to sing “Gao Shan Qin”, a very appealing ethnic song.

Following the music was the Wheel of Fortune Cookies, a fun game devised by the Masters of Ceremony, whereby whenever a person from the audience was interviewed and could give correct answers to the questions asked, a prize (e.g., a silk scarf) was awarded to that person. Lots of laughs were created in arriving at the answers, and everyone who was brave enough to volunteer to try to give the answers in front of the audience was rewarded with a lovely prize.

For the multi-course dinner, the food was scrumptious. It included such mouthwatering dishes as: Seafood with Gold Corn, Butterfly Platter, Pottage with Corn and Fish, Green Fresh, Beef Stew with Huangzi Mushroom, Ganoderma Lucidum Mushroom with Cabbage Sprouts, Good Luck Fried Chicken, Lobsters with Green Onions and Ginger, Steamed Seafood, Yangzhou Fried Rice, Happy Ever After (Noodles), Cake/Dessert & Red Bean Soup.

Besides good food, fine fellowship, fun and entertainment, each attendee left the place with a lovely souvenir of a bag containing a hardcover booklet with a pen, and a key-chain purse, all embossed with CALA logos in golden colors on red backgrounds. Two lucky persons even won the raffles of either a kindle fire or a nook. The evening ends with the singing of melodious and familiar songs by Min Chou, Maria Fung and Julie Wu.

The success of the evening was mainly due to the hard work of the 40th Anniversary Celebration Committee, co-chaired by Maria Fung and Liana Zhou, with Min Chou, Dora Ho, Sai Deng, Lili Li, Yingqi Tang, Sally Tseng, Priscilla Yu and Lisa Zhao as members. The talented performers and some guests were recommended by them.

The Local Arrangement Committee, co-chaired by Qi Chen and Lian Ruan, also played a major role, especially in finding the nice and big Restaurant, negotiating for the menu, designing and printing flyers for each table. Their members included Sharon Hu, Denise Kwan, Lorna Yin-Ching Tang, Jiaxun Wu, and Lisa Zhao.

Special thanks also go to the following leaders who dedicated their time and efforts for CALA in helping us achieving our goals for the 2012/2013 Esther Lee’s CALA Presidential Initiatives. They are: Dr. Hwa-Wei Lee, Haipeng Li, Maria Fung, Sally Tseng, Kuei Chiu, Min Chou, and Dr. Shali Zhang, for their able assistance on fundraising, solicitations of advertisers, and publicities. We want to attribute our fundraising success to their dedication and strong support to CALA! Sally C. Tseng especially deserved honorable mention for her extraordinary achievement in raising more funds for the occasion/year than any amount raised in the previous years.

China Librarians Summer Program at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Lian Ruan, Head Librarian, Illinois Fire Service Institute, Director of IFSI International Programs, Program Director of Chinese Librarians Summer Program (2005-Present)

The Chinese Librarians Summer Program at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (UIUC) has been developed through a strong partnership between UIUC and the Chinese Academic and University Library Association (CAULA), Library Society of China. In China, the program has become a well-known international librarian exchange program. From 2005 to 2013, 220 participants from 84 organizations all over China have been part of the program. In 2014, the program anticipates that more than 30 participants come in June, and more than 10 past participants will also join the 10th anniversary activities at UIUC.

The program aims to cultivate participants’ leadership abilities, enabling them to be innovative leaders in the field of Library and Information Science in China and the world in the 21st century. As a host organization, UIUC offers a well-known public university library and a highly-ranked school of library and information science. The program helps participants conduct a comparative study on the trends and challenges faced by libraries all over the world, especially in China and USA. It assists participants in gathering relevant resources and gaining a better understanding of the American libraries that are among the first-class libraries of the world. It helps participants seek solutions for issues encountered by Chinese and American libraries through reports, case studies, scholarly communications, and observation at field trips during the program. The participants intensively visit important academic libraries, including the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, Columbia University, Princeton University, Yale University, Harvard University, MIT, Stanford University, and University of California at Berkeley along with the Library of Congress and the Illinois State Library. In past years, participants have attended the ALA Annual Conference in Chicago and made presentations at the 2009 International Relations Round Table (IRRT) Pre-Conference on digitization.

All program participants have returned China and many have excelled in their careers after the program. Some of them have been promoted to higher-level leadership positions. Others have led critical initiatives such as the establishment of the first multi-type library consortium in China, the Jilin Library Consortium, which was co-founded by Director Qun Yu (2008 participant), Northeast Normal University Library. Mr. Yuanxin Zhong (2009 participant), department head at Jinan University Library, received an Elsevier Foundation grant award for his proposal entitled “Developing a Service-Oriented Database of Cases of Emergency Management.” Many have published papers on what they learned from the program in the USA and how they have applied it to their daily work as librarians.

The program actively interacts with Chinese American Librarians Association (CALA) and its members. The program has invited CALA leaders and members as annual guest speakers since 2005 to promote CALA, CALA programs and initiatives, and CALA members’ career achievements. These CALA leaders and members are: Haipeng Li, Xudong Jin, Sally C. Tseng, Liana Zhou, Shali Zhang, Lisa Zhao, Karen Wei, Jim Cheng, Chengzhi Wang, Tang Li, Jianye He, Linda C. Smith, Kate Williams, and Maureen Sullivan. Lian Ruan was invited to speak about the program at the 2008 CALA Annual Program — “Global Outreach: A U.S.-China Experience.” In 2010, all program participants received one-year CALA memberships as part of the summer program benefits and were formerly introduced to CALA. In 2012 and 2013 respectively, 100 past outstanding program participants also received the same CALA membership benefits to recognize their contribution to the program and the LIS field. The 2013 program participants have attended the CALA Annual Program and Annual Membership Meeting in Chicago.
